Why Fairtrade?

At Hampstead Tea and First Ray we believe that in addition to preserving and protecting the land we use to grow our quality teas, we must also respect the people who work the land.

The workers, farmers and families on Hampstead Tea's partner Makaibari Tea Estate and thousands of others benefit from fair trade practices, designed to combat the cycle of poverty characteristic to developing countries. Fairtrade certification guarantees international standards for fair and socially responsible trade with producers in developing countries. The price we pay to our tea estates includes a premium which is used by the community for social, economic, educational and medical improvements. By choosing fairtrade, you are giving your support to the millions of farmers, workers and their families in many of the poorest countries in the world and helping to make a significant difference.

Why Organic and Biodynamic?

Organic and biodynamic means more than just being chemical free. It's the way your food is grown and processed with our entire ecosystem being integrated and linked. Soil. Plants. Animals. Food. People. Environment. Everything is connected to each other and is a part of the greater whole.

Organic and biodynamic means better taste, purer quality, chemical and GMO free, safety, health and wellbeing, the sustainability of our planet. By choosing organic tea it demonstrates that you care about your staff, respect their values and our planet and are prepared to make the difference.
